A Date That Lives in Hypocrisy

Stewart Taylor

In 1984 Margaret Thatcher delivered a message of stunning cruelty to the six million freedom loving capitalists of Hong Kong: “Under the spreading banyan tree, I sold you, you’re no more free,” and an unlucky 13 years later, July 1, 1997, the People’s Liberation (Red) Army goose stepped its way into that hoodwinked former colony. On hand for the sorry spectacle were Prince Charles and Vice President Gore, both enthusiastically applauding the surrender of these six million formerly free souls to the merciless butchers of Tiananmen. And America snored...

Future historians will date the snowballing of America’s moral decline with this perfidy. Never again can America claim to be an idealistic nation under God wanting only to extend His blessings of liberty to the oppressed around the world. We, too, sold out the six million because our true guiding light is no longer a just God in Heaven, but rather the god of greed, Mammon, on Wall Street.

Mammon, the nightmare of early American Christendom and a juicy target for William Jennings Bryan, was held by most Americans as the incarnation of a Satan ever yearning to destroy their liberty, who tried mightily to subvert the teachings of Jesus and make it appear that the single minded pursuit of wealth at all costs was actually an exercise in Christian patriotism.

Even such a luminous paragon of patriotic virtue, Mitch McConnell, fell under the sway of this Godless Mammon that now embraces the Communist Party of China, and in this Senate Leader’s slavering subservience to the demands of Wall Street, sponsored the U.S. Hong Kong Act of 1992, which institutionalized the sell-out of the six million and passed both chambers of Congress with large majorities of both parties and was signed into law by the person who had been vice president when President Reagan defeated the Soviet Union. How hastily did the hypocrites abandon the moral high ground. Now they abandon us.

This loss of freedom suffered by the six million was just what Wall Street (and the City of London) ordered. Never before had the United States meekly acquiesced to such a surrender....

Tax the Rich and Abolish the Dept

John Henry Kagi

If you owe the bank $100,000 it’s your problem. If you owe the bank $100,000,000 it’s the bank’s problem. If the banks owe each other $15,000,000,000,000 it’s the taxpayer’s problem. We shouldn’t have such problems. Getting rid of that 15 trillion dollar debt by getting rid of the banks that hold it is the simplest way of getting ourselves out of the mess the rich have dumped us in. We the People are also We the Taxpayers and We the Voters and if we stick together we can pass a Constitutional Amendment that abolishes debt, just like the one that abolished prohibition.

The Constitution allows an amendment process that can accomplish the cancellation of all debt with a simple political process: If the voters want all debts to be cancelled they elect only senators and representatives at both the state and national levels who want the same. If the politicians in Washington won’t pass this amendment, then the state legislatures can do an end run around Congress and pass resolutions calling for a Constitutional Convention for the purpose of passing a universal debt forgiveness amendment.

The Amendment is then ratified by the same legislatures that called for the Convention, and it becomes the law and all debt is gone! The only people hurt are the rich, the Communist Party of China, and the Corporate State. Everyone else, 99% of us, is home free. What a brilliant escape hatch the Founding Fathers left for We the People giving ample evidence that the Founder’s enlightened democratic vision penetrated hundreds of years into the future. The Spirit of ’76 is here to save us!

After the Amendment passes, everything else will, at first, remain the same but as this debt laden albatross is finally lifted from America’s weary neck various savings will become apparent. Employers, no longer having to use business (and sometimes personal) funds to pay the debts, will suddenly be free of debt and could then make a greater personal profit while expanding the business and simultaneously giving significant raises to their employees, many of whom are clutching mortgages that will just as suddenly be marked “PAID IN FULL,” all while lowering the prices charged to the firm’s customers, who respond in kind. This is the “rising tide” you’ve heard tell about and the only obstructions standing in the way of our economic salvation and national re-liberation is our onerous debt and the opposition of the greedy rich. We can kill two birds with one stone.

All debt, foreign and domestic, will be lifted off our country but if we elect the right legislators they can finesse the amendment by exempting current corporate debt from the general forgiveness and directing all future debt payments by corporations be made directly to the US Treasury as innovative neo-taxes to finance the government. So, whatever the corporations now pay to banks and bondholders in interest and principle will instead go to general treasury funds thus lowering the average American’s tax bill along with eliminating his debts to his creditors. It’s a win-win situation for the large majority of Americans.

Since most Americans owe more than they own, most Americans will come out of it considerably ahead. All they have to do is vote for their OWN economic interests, just like the rich do now....

Traditional Values Warped by Corporate State

Dauphin Thompson

Money problems are the #1 cause of family breakup. If we ever want to get back to our middle American family value called “stability” that we once so happily enjoyed, we need to get back to the kind of national economy we had back in healthier times. In the pre 1980 era most companies employed executives who were compensated at a rate generally 17 times what the average factory or office worker earned and our economy was healthy, proportionate and rational.

This is no longer true as the rich discovered and invented ways to make huge amounts of cash that weren’t available to outsiders. They pulled more and more of society’s chips over to their side of the table and employed means, sneaky and underhanded, in a variety of ways, to keep it there.

Once we collectively knew that getting into debt on any level was an extremely dangerous thing and we avoided it like the plague. That was in the pre-WWII period but since then our corporate dictated culture made us into “buy-now-pay-later” consumers intent on “instant gratification” to the point that our own comfortable futures and that of our children steadily recede from our grasp and into theirs’. We indulge our appetites while paying our hard earned money to the rich because their advertising convinced us that the best course possible is to voluntarily redistribute our money to them for their own unadvertised purposes. The Corporate State led us to neglect our duty to our families to save and invest wisely, for education, for retirement and for an unexpected rainy day, just so it could get hugely rich off us.

American values and financial sanity have been warped in this post war Corporate State era where the profit and prosperity of the corporations and the rich are of absolute paramount importance to the ruling class. They would not make money if we followed our traditional value of thriftiness, even frugality, and used our money for our future instead of their present. When was the last time some corporate shill advised the average American to save for a rainy day? That would be sacrilege to the gospel of wealth. So they slowly, but effectively, turned us into a nation of impulsive spend thrifts. Now we suffer in debt. We lost a major source of stability....

A Call To Arms

Dangerfield Newby

We the People have a Right to keep and bear arms for a reason. We have a patriotic duty to continue our tradition of being “Minutemen at the ready” to deal with an encroaching tyranny. We have a law called the Posse Comitatus Act that holds that the government cannot send the regular army against the people who are engaging in a general uprising because if the government actually needs to call out the army to put down a rebellion, that government has obviously lost all legitimacy and deserves to be overthrown.

The original Minutemen sprang into action on April 19, 1775, to put down an attempt to seize our firearms and so dash our hopes for freedom, this more than a year before Independence was declared. The Supreme Court recently held that individuals (in the same sense the Minutemen were individuals) have a right to firearms, even in urban areas, to facilitate their right to self protection. The Second Amendment says that firearms

A Marie Antoinette Moment?

“There’s class warfare alright. But it is my class, the rich class, that’s making war, and we’re winning.” Warren Buffett - The New York Times, 11/06/2006

He understands the situation.

She didn’t.
